

Questions of final assessment on the discipline “Comparative typology of English and native languages”

1. The definition of linguistic typology
2. Typological classification
3. Linguistic and non-linguistic typology
4. General characteristics of historic development of linguistic typology
5. Four periods and their peculiarities (J. Buranov's classification)
6. Influence of different factors in historic development of linguistic typology
7. Six factors and their peculiarities
8. Main parameters modifying the subject matter and branches of linguistic typology
9. Genetic, areal and comparative typologies
10. Structural typology
11. Language hierarchy. Analysis of each level from a typological point of view
12. Definition of the term “category”.
13. Different categories worked out by foreign and Russian scholars.
14. Typological categories and their main parameters.
15. Definition of the term “category”.
16. Analyses of typological categories of nouns.
17. Main parameters of modifying typological categories: interlanguage, interlevel and interclass.
18. Methods of investigating foreign and native languages
19. Language as the system of signs.
20. The idea of the type of the language.
21. Compare phonological system of English and L1
22. Division of vowels
23. Division of consonants
24. Compare grammatical system of English and L1
25. Synthetic and analytic structure of languages
26. Typology of some grammatical categories
27. Word formation in English and L1
28. Similarities of English and L1 in the field of word-formation
29. Differences of English and L1 in the field of word-formation
30. The definition of linguistic typology
31. Typological classification
32. The system of vowels
33. The system of consonants
34. Methods of investigation
35. Characterize substantial and non-substantial types of comparison
36. Two types of an etalon language
37. One-level and cross level approaches to comparison
38. Analyses of typological categories of nouns
39. Differences and connections between language and speech units
40. Main units of phonology
41. Primary and secondary grammatical categories

- 42. Word formation by affixation
- 43. Word formation by conversion, compounding and abbreviation
- 44. Word formation by clipping
- 45. Substantial and non-substantial types of comparison
- 46.